8. Update on Social Impact Partnerships Program (SIP), SFPUC's Good Neighbor Strategies in Contracting

GM Kelly noted the history of the Social Impact Partnership Program (SIP), discussed the challenges that were faced, and addressed how those challenges were met. He indicated in 2009 & 2011 the Commission passed a Community Benefits Policy/Good Neighbor Policy and an Environmental Justice Policy. He noted an environmental justice analysis was conducted to determine how the digester project could benefit the community and not impose cumulative negative impacts. He discussed the supply chain analysis that was performed to determine what services are needed to build the projects and to determine any other ancillary benefits could be provided for community benefit. He discussed the creation of the Contractor Assistance Center, the Project Labor Agreement.

Tracy Zhu, Social Impact Partnership Manager, provided an overview of the SIP, indicating it expands the SFPUC's ability to implement policies by inviting consulting firms to give back to the communities in which they perform SFPUC work. She noted that community benefits are values that firms provide directly to non-profits and schools, such as volunteer hours, in-kind donations, and/or financial contributions.

Ms. Zhu presented a summary of SIP commitments and stated that 84 SFPUC contracts include community benefits (80 non-construction contracts and four alternative delivery construction contracts) and that there is $35M total value in commitments, with $9.3M of the community benefits value delivered to the community since 2011 ($5M of community benefits value delivered is financial). She reviewed the distribution of the $9.3M, including value of volunteer hours, value of in-kind donations, and discussed the distribution of the $5M in financial support.

Ivy Fine, Program Administration Bureau Manger, reviewed the SIP contracting process and stated best-practices are followed throughout the contracting process which contain several checks and balances. She stated the threshold to include social impact commitments in a solicitation is $5M and indicated that social impact guidelines are included in the request for proposal. She noted that submission of a SIP proposal is optional. She further discussed the proposal evaluation and selection processes (evaluation and scoring) and transparent cost evaluation (cost-control measures).

Ms. Zhu indicated that once a contract is awarded there is an accountability process to ensure the firm follows-through with their commitment. She discussed the process and reporting requirements (annual workplans, bi-annual reports, and annual newsletters) and documenting requirements (timesheet tracking volunteer hours, check stubs, receipts, and letters from beneficiaries). She indicated firms must deliver community benefit commitments over the term of the agreement. She stated a Social Impact Partnership Dashboard will launch soon.

Ms. Zhu stated that SIPs are good for our communities and are about people. She provided examples as how the SIP impacts the community (1) removing barriers for women in the construction trades, (2) diversifying the pipeline for professional service jobs, (3) inclusion in professional service jobs, (4) small business support, and (5) stabilizing homeowners and building intergenerational wealth.

Ms. Fine and GM Kelly responded to a question from Commissioner Paulson regarding who prepares and develops the technical questions.

GM Kelly responded to a question from Commissioner Paulson as to how a firm determines the difference between a pre-apprentice and apprentice.

Commissioner Harrington expressed gratitude to all the staff involved on the SIP. He indicated it is not just about pipes, pumps, and plants but it is also about people and that improving the impacted communities.

President Maxwell stated the SIP is a good way to do business and is a good model. She thanked staff for their good work.

Commissioner Moran noted the SIP is an unusual program in the City and the County of San Francisco. He stated the presentation was good and shows the program is reaching point of maturity and that contractor are learning what they need to do and have grown to better understand the communities in which they work.

GM Kelly concurred with the Commissioners' comments and noted other City departments and utilities across the country are looking to the SFPUC for guidance.
